

Commissioners of the California Public Utilities Commission

Michael Peevey, CPUC President

As President of the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC), Michael R. Peevey is committed to protecting the public interest by promoting consumer needs, while challenging utilities to embrace new technologies and provide safe, high-quality services.

Mr. Peevey works to maximize energy efficiency and demand response opportunities and ensure that California's environment is protected. He is a strong supporter of renewable energy and procurement requirements for utilities, and is a leader in implementing California's Solar and Greenhouse Gas Initiatives.

President Peevey has made it a priority to work closely with sister agencies, such as the California Department of Water Resources, the Independent System Operator, the California Energy Commission, and the Air Resources Board-- agencies with overlapping or complementary responsibilities to the CPUC, to assure that California has adequate energy resources and transmission facilities to support its growing population and improving economy.

The Governor appoints five Commissioners to oversee the business of the California Public Utilities Commission; one to serve as Commission President. All are responsible for ensuring that customers have safe, reliable utility service at reasonable rates, protecting against fraud, and promoting the health of California's economy.

Dian Grueneich

Dian M. Grueneich was appointed to the Public Utilities Commission by Governor Schwarzenegger in January 2005. Commissioner Grueneich is actively involved in national and international initiatives to address climate change by investing in energy efficiency, renewables and advanced coal technologies.

She is a CPUC representative on Governor Schwarzenegger's Climate Action Team, a member of the National Energy Efficiency Leadership Group, and serves on the Leadership Council of the China-US Energy Efficiency Alliance.

Commissioner Grueneich co-chairs the effort developing national guidelines for energy efficiency programs. She serves on the NARUC Task Force on Climate Policy and is a member of the California Green Action Team. She is the lead commissioner for California's energy efficiency programs and for $3 billion of transmission projects to access renewable resource areas.

Rachelle Chong

Commissioner Rachelle Chong was appointed to the CPUC by Governor Schwarzenegger in January 2006. She has been a career communications regulatory attorney, practicing before both the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) as well as the CPUC. In May 1994, President Clinton nominated Commissioner Chong to the FCC. She distinguished herself as an advocate of simple pragmatic regulation, competitive communications markets, and First Amendment rights, and the FCC implemented the historic Telecommunications Act of 1996 during her tenure. She is proud to be the first Asian American to serve as a Commissioner of the FCC and the CPUC. Commissioner Chong shares the Governor's goal of an upgraded, state-of-the-art infrastructure available for all Californians and businesses. At the CPUC, she continues formidable work to update the regulatory environment in a fast changing world.

John Bohn

Governor Schwarzenegger appointed Commissioner John Bohn to the CPUC in May 2005, and the California State Senate confirmed his appointment in April 2006.

In addition to his duties at the CPUC, Commissioner Bohn was recently elected as a Director of the National Endowment for Democracy in Washington, D.C. and to the Advisory Board of the Yale Institute for Corporate Governance and Performance. He also serves as Trustee of Northern Trust Multi-Advisor Fund, an international multi-advisor investment fund of the Northern Trust Company, and is a member of the Capital Markets Reform Commission, chartered by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to re-evaluate the operation of U.S. capital markets in light of globalization. Commissioner Bohn is a principal in GlobalNet Partners, N.A., LLC, a global advisory and consulting firm that provides market focus, strategic advisory and active client development services as well as management and capital to U.S. and foreign firms. Commissioner Bohn is also a member of the Council on Foreign Relations in New York, and a director of the World Affairs Council in San Francisco.

Timothy Alan Simon

Governor Schwarzenegger appointed Timothy Alan Simon to the California Public Utilities Commission February 15, 2007. Simon has a background in business and financial services and regulatory law, and served as the first African American appointments secretary in the Office of the Governor. Prior to joining the administration, he served as general counsel and chief compliance officer for Global Crown

Capital, LLC where he was responsible for development and implementation of legal and compliance policies for the firm. From 2002 to 2005, Simon was vice president and chief compliance officer for PreferredTrade, Inc, an online financial securities and futures broker. Prior to that, he was a consultant to Barclays Global Investors after serving for three years first as principal and associate general principal and director of new business counsel in the legal department and later as development in the financial services division at Robertson Stephens Investment Bankers. From 1995 to 1999, Simon was senior counsel in the Office of the General Counsel for Bank of America and from 1993 to 1995 he served as vice president and managing compliance director for the Wells Fargo Bank Savings and Investment Group.
